LOCAL AND PERSONAL

FORMAL OPENING.

The Medina District, South Texas Department, San Antonio Public Service Company, owners and operators of Hondo's light and power electric service, gave a formal opening of its district office last Friday afternoon at the Rath building on Bandera Avenue. As stated in this paper last week, the interior of this building has been arranged into three divisions, the rear section being used for a storage and work room. The center of the building is arranged into an office with every modern equipment for a business office. And the front is used for a display room. On this occasion, the display room was decorated with red and yellow gladioli in gold baskets.

In this display room was arranged to the best possible advantage a vast assortment of electrical equipment and utensils, among them Hotpoint ranges, General Electric refrigerators, Westinghouse washing machines, irons, lamps and other electrical appliances. Here from 4 to 10 P. M., courteous employees of the company welcomed visitors, explained the many useful articles on exhibition and served punch and ice cream to all who called.

Visitors to the number of 211 registered. Company officials who called were Mr. Chester N. Chubb, President, and Mr. N. Bernard Gust, General Superintendent of the South Texas Department.

At 9:30 little Ann Kelly drew for the awarding of the prizes, and Mrs. Joe Rieber and Mrs. C. B. Schilling were the winners of the Westinghouse Automatic Iron and the General Electric Alarm Clock.

On the reception committee were Misses Claire West and Ina King, and Messrs. W. F. Gaudin, Paul Gose, and V. H. Crow.

Visitors were pleased both with the reception accorded them and with the instructive insight gained into the varied and practical utilities on display. That the company has a well founded confidence in Hondo as a place that will appreciate this enterprise is fully attested by this progressive and forward step which this company has taken.

VISITORS HONORED.

Miss Evelyn Knopp entertained with a charmingly appointed tea at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Knopp, Friday afternoon, complimenting her house guests, Miss Joyce Caraway and Miss Cecille Brown of Nixon, and Miss Ruth Hill of Smithville. Guests included about thirty-five members of the younger set.

The reception suite, with roses and zinnias for floral decoration and blue and pink tapers lighting the scene, was an attractive setting for the event. Receiving the guests were Mrs. T. B. Knopp, Miss Joyce Caraway, Miss Evelyn Knopp, Miss Cecille Brown, Mrs. J. G. Barry, and Miss Ruth Hill.

The refreshment board was laid with an exquisite lace cloth and centered with a crystal bowl of pink roses and lighted pink tapers in crystal holders. The service was also of crystal. Refreshments consisted of sandwiches, assorted fancy cakes, nuts, mints and punch. Misses Frances Haegelin, Annette Rothe, Doris Windrow and Wanda Redmond presided at the tea table.

Other members of the house party were Mrs. M. L. McDowell, Miss Mary Ann Noonan and Miss Margaret Ann Knopp.

Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Barry entertained with a picnic supper and swimming party at Concan, in honor of their cousin, Miss Ruth Hill, of Smithville, and Misses Cecille Brown and Joyce Caraway of Nixon, who were guests of Miss Evelyn Knopp. The personnel included members of the high school and college sets.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT CLUB.

Dr. and Mrs. O. B. Taylor were hosts to the Wednesday Night Bridge Club and several guests at their home Wednesday evening of this week. There were five tables of play, including Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Heath, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Starnes, Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Knopp, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, Dr. and Mrs. J. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Brucks, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kollman, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Barry, Mrs. B. R. Eichenroht, Misses Lillian and Josephine Brucks, and Dr. and Mrs. Taylor. Trophies were awarded Mrs. Earl Starnes and Mr. L. E. Heath for members and Miss Lillian Brucks for guest. A refreshing fruit punch was served.

We, the Hondo Volunteer Fire Department, wish to thank one and all for their splendid cooperation that was tendered us in sponsoring the Firemen's Benefit Dance, and we hope that you will give us like support and cooperation for the dances which we intend to sponsor from time to time in the future, as it is through your support that we can sponsor dances successfully and at the same time help a good cause. We are trying to build up a Fire Department of which both you and we can be proud. It takes time, money and cooperation to accomplish results, but with assistance we can put the matter over in a "big way".

QUIHI NOTES.

And the angel of the Lord called ... and said ... Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him; for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son ... from me. Gen. 22:11 12.

The terrible tension is broken; the heavenly veto stops the sacrifice and the heartache and the puzzling why's. Hoping against hope to the bitter end and calmly ready for the worst, the test is ended. As long as the Lord sends tests, there is hope. The world at large gets no tests; it only gets the bitter taste of its failures. There every man has his price; if that is offered, he is ready for anything. That needs no test; that's a forgone conclusion, tried out in cases beyond number, high and low. There a course of self-assertion and self-maintenance goes on, consistently and persistently, no room for God. No bill of health, no clearance of a critical case is wanted. There, for thousands of years, he tinkering and tampering, the slapping and backslapping, the furious barnstorming now in this, now in that direction; goes on in a direct counter-course against God. His means and methods are not desired. Who is He that we should obey His voice? And the blind stagger they are suffering with, prevents them from seeing the futility and abortiveness of their attempts, of their defeatist course. All this is beyond the test-stage, clear as daylight. But Christians get their tests in regular fashion. These serve as eye-openers, as heart-cleansers. But how they often wince and warp and whine when these do come. When their patience is tested by a long siege of untoward incidents; their long-suffering, by feuds and frays in their surroundings; their kindness, by hard-boiled ingrates; their love, by lack of responsiveness; their selfishness and penny, by the Lord's demands for greater liberality. How often they fail and break down, when the Lord asks for a real sacrifice as that of Abraham's, in size and quality, how that obedience to God then openly runs or revolts, how that fear of God is then shoved aside by the fear of loss. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation," says St. James. Most Christians prefer their blessedness in a way without hardship and tes.

And there were smiling faces at the Medina Hospital—in contrast to the tears and groans that often are found at such places. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Seathoff are the happy recipients of a strong and contented little daughter. And many others smile with them. Real cause for rejoicing and thanksgiving.

Mrs. Geo. W. Reitzer also has been an occupant of that place for a short while. After a minor operation, she is recovering fast in her home, and helpful and willing hands help speeding that recovery. May the Lord sustain her funds of happy energy.

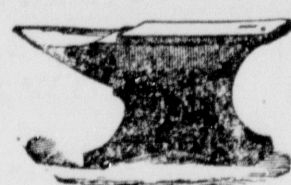

A few more have ventured out to see the beauty and blessings of their home state. Mr. John Lindenburg took a peep at the ocean at Galveston, enough to make the heart grow wider and fonder; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Saathoff gave their preference to Corpus Christi, with the same results. And a few postals from our friend, the Rev. F. A. Bracher, tell and show that he at present is walking and riding in the lake regions of upper Italy and the southern part of Switzerland, with snow-capped mountains wafting a cool breeze to that Texas wanderer, much too cool for him, wherets his less fortunate fellow-Texans swelter under different temperatures.

Announcements for August the 30th: Sunday school and Junior Bible class at 9: no services; neither service nor Sunday school on September the 6th.

TO HAVE FOUGHT A GOOD FIGHT IS THE BEST VICTORY

The primaries are over in Texas. "We met the enemy"—and took it on the chin!

But still—
For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the right that needs assistance
For friends both tried and true
And the good that we can do—
We are still in the ring—downed but not out!

Where is the next good fight?

TRADE MAKES FOR PEACE.

"The nations of the world will not fight for the things they need if they can get these things through the peaceful pursuit of trade ...
"Peace makes for trade—we all know that, and as practical business men we stand united against the threat of destruction and world-wide bankruptcy that war so surely holds. But just as surely, just as inevitably, trade makes for peace, and the average American who seeks a higher standard of living in a peaceful world today will find the answer to his quest in a more generous two-way foreign trade policy."—Edgar W. Smith, vice-president, General Motors Export Company.

BUSINESS AS USUAL.

Numerous prognosticators are of the opinion that the old bogey of an election year being a bad business year has been at least temporarily outlawed. They feel that the 1936 political campaign will have little effect on the recovery movement.
Even so, it must not be forgotten that governmental action cannot help but affect business, for good or ill, in the long run. When the public feels that official policies are inimical to the great industries that provide jobs and opportunities, it becomes difficult to get necessary money to venture into those channels—and, as a consequence, industrial development lags. But when the public feels that official policies encourage lawful and legitimate industrial operations, money flows freely, men are put to work, and real prosperity follows.

This is not a partisan matter. Neither the Republican nor Democratic parties can justly claim a corner on statesmanship. It is the duty of public men of both parties to work for the common good, to pursue policies that encourage investors, and to give all industry a fair break, penalizing none and favoring none. When that time comes, no election will have an adverse effect on business. And in the meantime, let's hope that, as forecast, the election of 1936 will not appreciably hamper the recovery movement.—Industrial News Review.

TEN COSTS INSTEAD OF ONE.

It is sometimes argued that since the South is especially suited to growing cotton and tobacco and the North and West to growing corn, hay, and meat, it is better for Southern farmers to go ahead and grow cotton and tobacco and buy the other things from the North and West. In regard to this argument, however, The Progressive Farmer well says that there are several important facts which the Southern farmer should consider:

"Fact No. 1 is that the world doesn't want enough cotton, tobacco peanuts, etc., to keep Southern farmers busy growing them.

"Fact No. 2 is that even on farms primarily concerned with growing cotton, tobacco, etc., there is no way to have even a half-way satisfactory year-round distribution of labor unless other products are grown besides these money crops.

"Fact No. 3 is perhaps still more important. Instead of there being only one cost to consider, namely, the (Continued on last page)

Russian Conspirators Against Stalin Plead Guilty—Italy and France Sparring Over Spain—Roosevelt Primed for Drouth Area Tour.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SIXTEEN men, arraigned in Moscow on charges of plotting the assassination of Dictator Josef Stalin and the seizure of power in the Soviet republic, calmly pleaded guilty. Two of them, Gregory Zinoviev and Leo Kamenev, were members with Stalin 13 years ago of a triumvirate that governed Russia and are well known to the outside world. The confessions did not end the trial, for the defendants contradicted and accused one another until the case was in a jumble. Some of them, like Zinoviev, proudly accepted responsibility for the plot, which was said to have been engineered by the exiled Leon Trotsky. It was believed all sixteen would face the firing squad.

Twelve more men and one woman, the government announced, were held for examination and probable trial. Some of these were involved in the confessions of the sixteen conspirators.

In the case on trial the defendants revealed the fact that not only were they plotting the assassination of Stalin and four others, but planned also to betray Trotsky and place Zinoviev and Kamenev in supreme power.

Trotsky, at Hoenefoss, Norway, scoffed at the Moscow proceedings as "humbug." "For political vengeance," he said, "the trial puts the Dreyfus scandal and the reichstag fire in the shadow. The confessions were forced by the 'Ogpu' (secret police), which gives the accused a choice between confession according to the Ogpu's desires and taking lesser penalties or death."

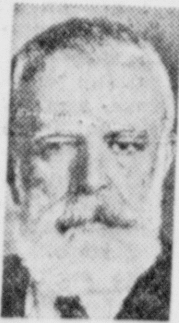

PREMIER MUSSOLINI, insisting that neutrality in the Spanish war must mean absolute nonintervention, suddenly put Italy's air force of 1,500 war planes in readiness for flight to the aid of the Spanish rebels if France would not abandon her support of the Madrid regime.

News of this stirred the People's Front government of France to indignation. Officials in Paris said if Italy sent arms and munitions to the rebels in Spain or otherwise openly aided them, France would have to abandon her neutral position and help the socialists.

For a day this situation alarmed the statesmen of Europe, but soon it was stated in both Rome and Paris that negotiations for the neutrality accord were going forward nicely with prospects for a satisfactory agreement that would include both Italy and Germany. Whether Germany would come in, however, was still in doubt. Berlin was further provoked against the Madrid government by the stopping and search of the German steamer Kamerun by Spanish warships off Cadiz. German warships were ordered to protect German shipping "by all means" and the German charge d'affaires at Madrid was instructed to "protest immediately and in the sharpest form against the action of the Spanish warship, which constituted a violation of all international law."

DISPATCHES from the French border said Spanish rebel warships finally had begun the long threatened bombardment of San Sebastian and Irun, and that the loyalists were carrying out the threatened execution of the 1,900 Fascist hostages they were holding there. The battleship Espana fired a lot of heavy shells toward Fort Guadalupe but for a time at least was apparently not trying to hit that stronghold because many of their sympathizers were held prisoners in the fort. The Guadalupe garrison was hesitant in returning the fire for fear that shells would fall on French territory. Already the French government was angered by the dropping of bombs on French border towns, though it was disputed whether they came from loyalist or rebel planes.

The Fascists captured the important town of Badajoz, near the Portuguese border, at the point of the bayonet, and were reported to have executed 1,500 government adherents taken there. The rebels also reported a victory near Zaragoza after a bloody battle. General Franco met General Mola and "President" Virgilio Cabanellas at the northern rebel headquarters in Burgos and planned for further advances of their southern and northern columns on Madrid. These will be supplemented by 4,000 Moors and foreign legion veterans marching eastward from Badajoz.

Virgilio Cabanellas

SOIL conservation compliance is to be checked by a system of aerial photography, if the experiments now being carried on by the AAA are satisfactory. The plan is still only on trial but several millions of acres have already been photographed, it was learned today. So far it is proving cheaper and more efficient than the usual way of checking farmers' soil conservation compliance. The air pictures also are being extensively used by the soil conservation service to map erosion and soil depletion and to determine remedies.

SEVEN minutes of lively fighting put Joe Louis of Detroit once more on the road to the heavyweight championship. He made his come-back by knocking out Jack Sharkey, one time title holder, in the third round at New York. The Lithuanian sailor from Boston was plucky enough but proved no match for the much younger negro. Louis now wants an immediate return match with Max Schmeling, but the German insists his next fight must be with Jim Braddock.

CATALONIA, which for four years has been an autonomous region within the Spanish state, and which has been supporting the Madrid government against the Fascist rebels, sees in the present conditions the opportunity to establish its full independence. The generalitat or government council decreed confiscation of all private property; and then, "to eliminate dual control and place all responsibility in one place," all magistrates, judges and others appointed by the Madrid government were relieved of their duties. The council also announced it would act henceforth in complete independence in maintaining order. The Catalonian decree promulgated plans for a single tax and speedy suppression of multiple taxation. The basis for the new tax plan, although undecided was presumed to be income, not land, as the large agricultural properties are to be collectivized.

POPE PIUS XI, addressing pilgrims from Malta, took another whack at communism. Alluding evidently to the civil war in Spain, he says: "The world is upside down, and sick from a grievous malady which threatens to become graver and more dangerous still. It is not necessary to say to you Maltese what this illness is, because you have a definite part in the tribulation."

"There is only the hand of God to aid humanity and put an end to the horrible massacres which are going on and all the offenses against human fraternity, against religion, priests and God."

PREPARATIONS for President Roosevelt's trip through the drouth region of the Middle West were practically completed and the Chief Executive was supplied with all the facts and figures needed to give him a comprehensive understanding of the situation before starting. This information was furnished mainly by WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, who was selected to accompany Mr. Roosevelt on the tour. Mr. Hopkins told the President that in the drouth area 90,000 persons already are on the WPA payrolls and that the number eventually will be 120,000 to 150,000, the relief work being continued through the winter. At this time the cost per man is about $50 a month. Estimates of the amount of money deemed necessary to meet the situation in the "dust bowl" were given the President by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell.

NEITHER Fascism nor Communism will be tolerated in Czechoslovakia, which is "a firm, indestructible lighthouse of democracy," said President Eduard Benes in a speech at Reichenberg. But he told the German minority which he was addressing particularly, that he hoped that in the fall "the Locarno powers will be able to work out a plan for general European co-operation and that good neighborly relations will be established between Germany and Czechoslovakia."

Leaders of the German minority in Czechoslovakia charge that unemployment in their part of the country is greater than anywhere else in Czechoslovakia—73 unemployed per 1,000 population, compared with the state average of 38 per 1,000. They charge that this is partly the result of the government's failure to place orders in German Bohemian factories and failure to give state jobs to members of the German minority.

President Benes

THERE is enough wheat in the United States for the usual domestic requirements of the season of 1936-37, according to the mid-summer report of the bureau of agricultural economics, but the supply of red spring wheat and durum is short and consequently importation of those varieties will be continued. The amount, however, will not be large, Secretary Wallace stated. "It is probable the spring wheat mills in the 1936-37 season will use a larger percentage of hard red winter and Pacific northwest wheat than last year," said the report. "A larger than usual quantity of soft red winter wheat is also likely to be used in bread flour. As a result, imports of milling wheat may be less than in 1935."

Wheat prices in the United States may be expected to average about as high relative to world price levels as during the 1935-36 season, when the price of No. 2 hard winter at Kansas City was 15 cents over Liverpool, the bureau said. During the last three years short crops together with other influences resulted in wheat prices in the United States being maintained unusually high relative to the world market price.

"Farm prices probably have been 20 cents to 30 cents higher than might have been expected with more nearly normal yields in the United States," the report continued. "A return of average or greater than average yields in the United States would result in an export surplus and prices would adjust toward an export basis."

"The acreage seeded for the 1936 crop, 74,000,000 acres, was the second largest in history, and seedings as large for the 1937 crop would produce fully enough wheat for total domestic utilization even if yields should turn out to be one-fourth below average."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was at his best as a radio orator when he addressed the summer camp at Chautauqua, N. Y., on foreign relations. He expressed his deep concern about tendencies in other parts of the world and spoke bitterly about the violation of both the letter and the spirit of international agreements "without regard to the simple principles of honor."

"Our closest neighbors are good neighbors," the President said. "If there are remoter nations that wish us not good but ill, they know that we are strong; they know that we can and will defend ourselves and defend our neighborhood."

Mr. Roosevelt said he had seen war on land and sea.

"I have seen blood running from the wounded," he said. "I have seen men coughing out their gassed lungs. I have seen the dead in the mud. I have seen cities destroyed. I have seen 200 limping, exhausted men come out of line—the survivors of a regiment of 1,000 who went forward forty-eight hours before. I have seen children starving. I have seen the agonies of mothers and wives. I hate war!"

Germans felt that Mr. Roosevelt's speech was aimed at them and resented his criticism. A Mexico City newspaper saw in it evidence that the Monroe doctrine was to be revived.

STARTING its 1937 building program, the Navy department opened bids on twelve new destroyers and six submarines. The bids came from private shipyards and estimates were submitted by navy yards, according to law. The latter were not made public.

It was found that the cost of construction has advanced approximately $1,000,000 per vessel in the last year. A year ago contracts for destroyers averaged $4,000,000, and $2,500,000 for submarines. Present bids were about a million dollars higher on each type of craft.

FOLLOWING the recommendation of Father Charles E. Coughlin, the National Union for Social Justice, in convention in Cleveland, endorsed the candidacy of Representative Lemke and O'Brien, heads of the Union party ticket. But, also on the advice of the priest, the Lemke platform was not endorsed. The 25,000 members of the N. U. S. J. present enthusiastically and unanimously elected Father Coughlin president of the organization. Lemke and O'Brien both appeared before the convention, delivered speeches and were given a rousing reception.

AN EQUITY suit attacking the constitutionality of the commodity exchange act, chiefly on the ground that it seeks to regulate interstate rather than interstate commerce in violation of the Constitution, was filed in the federal district court in Chicago.

The suit was instituted by William S. Moore, a member of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, and names the exchange, its board of directors, and the following as defendants: Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture; Leslie A. Fitz, supervisor of the commodity exchange administration in Chicago; Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce; Homer S. Cummings, United States attorney general; Michael L. Igoe, United States district attorney of the northern Illinois district; and Ernest J. Krueger, Chicago postmaster.

In his petition Mr. Moore asked that the commodity exchange act be declared unconstitutional, void and unenforceable.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt has come out again with a statement that the burden of taxes is regrettable and that there must be no new levies.

No New Tax Levies
hor tax increase by the next congress. He chose to get his views to the public by staging a conference at the White House the other day when he summoned Chairman Harrison of the senate finance committee and Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee for a breakfast meeting to discuss the subject. He followed this almost too quickly by releasing a statement, a letter from Secretary Morgenthau that substantiated the spoken word of his two congressional leaders.

But somehow the word from the White House prompted many observers here to pick flaws in the pronouncement; they began at once to find several places in the new picture that appeared to have been smeared over by the paint brush, and, in addition, there was a sudden yelp from the Republican national committee which did not help Mr. Roosevelt's plans to show the country that the tax burden had reached its peak.

The Republicans were quite harsh because they called attention to the fact that Mr. Roosevelt on three previous occasions had assured the country there would be no new taxes, and that in each instance new tax legislation somehow or other had been enacted by congress.

Aside from the presidential declaration that there would be no new taxes nor increases in the present levies and that there would be a study of the general tax structure, the President made the point through Secretary Morgenthau's letter that there were a good many hundreds of millions in "recoverable assets." He also urged upon the country that business has improved so rapidly that additional federal income may be expected from the present tax rates. This latter, of course, is true providing business holds its own or moves to higher levels but it is with respect to the recoverable assets that many questions now are being asked. For the sake of clarity, it may be explained that the recoverable assets to which Mr. Roosevelt referred consisted of the loans of federal money by the various emergency agencies for relief and recovery purposes. There are the millions loaned by the Reconstruction Finance corporation; the equally large amounts loaned by the Works Progress administration and the Public Works administration to states, counties and cities for relief or for job-making construction. In addition, there are loans by the Home Owners' Loan corporation, the Federal Farm Credit administration, loans for crop production, for marketing, and countless other types. These are all carried on the books as recoverable assets and their total may amount to as much as $8,000,000,000.

The policy of the New Deal administration is to consider these at their face value. It is the claim of the White House consistently that these loans will be repaid and that they can be used to retire an equal amount of the national debt, which, indeed, is true if the loans ever are repaid.

So, whenever the New Deal is called on to defend itself against charges of imposing a gigantic burden of tax or an equally gigantic burden of public debt, its spokesmen attempt to demonstrate that the public debt figure as well as the taxes must be considered in their relationship to these recoverable assets.

To explain the Roosevelt position further, one may recall that a month ago when the public debt reached the staggering total of $33,779,000,000 the Treasury secretary contended in a public statement that against this sum there should be offset the cash assets in the general fund of the Treasury, then totaling $2,681,000,000 and the $2,000,000,000 of gold that is sterilized in what is known as the exchange sterilization fund.

"In addition," Mr. Morgenthau added in his statement, "we have certain assets representing obligations due us upon which the Treasury will realize cash and which will ultimately be available for debt retirement. These recoverable assets—millions to home owners, to farmers, to railways, to banks and insurance companies, to states, and cities—now total more than $4,000,000,000. These three items—cash on hand, stabilization fund and recoverable loans—provide an offset of $8,750,000,000 to the $33,779,000,000 public debt."

It thus is made to appear directly in issue how completely the Roosevelt administration calculates using these recoverable assets in retiring the public debt. Having gone so thoroughly on record, it is difficult to see how there could have been such a mistake made as developed from the White House conference on taxes. I refer to the inclusion in Secretary Morgenthau's letter of a reference to the recoverable assets as one of the reasons why no new taxes will have to be levied. Some critics have stated boldly that the White House statements on the recoverable assets cannot be justified. Their assertion is that if the Treasury properly included recoverable assets as a thing to be used in offsetting the public debt, then by the same token those recoverable assets, or repayments of them, cannot be used to reduce the tax burden. In other words, the money represented by those assets cannot be spent in two different ways. Either it must be used to retire public debt or it must be used for current spending by the administration. It seems to be simply a refusal to believe the old adage that you cannot have your cake and eat it too.

If I should attempt to analyze the situation in the light of a personal equation I think I might properly say that if I loaned $500 to a friend and at the same time if I borrowed $500 from a bank, I might properly say the $500 loaned to the friend could be used to pay off the bank loan. So far, so good. But if the friend repaid $250 to me and I spent that $250 and had no other resources, I can't quite figure out how I would pay the bank the $500 I had borrowed from that institution.

Although perhaps my worries as an individual about government policies may not be very important because I am just one individual, I entertain considerable fear about those recoverable assets in another respect. For some reason—and I think I can state it—I doubt that a very large portion of those recoverable assets ever will be collected. I have a hunch that in the next fifteen or twenty years the bulk of those debts which the Roosevelt administration counts as repayable will be cancelled or defaulted. In either event, I think I see how politics is going to play an important part and I am convinced further that Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Roosevelt as well, if he shares Mr. Morgenthau's belief, is overlooking that very vital influence when he holds these loans as likely to be repaid.

I recall that the late Albert C. Ritchie, four times a Democratic governor of Maryland, predicted that the money loaned for the various purerment digging up and throwing from their graves the bodies of Catholic nuns, that horror seems beyond belief.

But Lord Rothermere's newspaper prints the statement that other nuns ALIVE were seized—three of them—their clothing saturated with gasoline, and burned to death. The Daily Mail also quotes the statement that in the city of Barcelona, when the radical forces had conquered the rebellious insurgent inhabitants, "any Catholic priest in the city was butchered without mercy."

Russia is, according to reliable reports, in constant communication with the Madrid government by radio. Newspapers in England, and the more conservative newspapers in France, declare that Russia, in addition to advising Madrid concerning the immediate civil war and helping the Spanish government by the purchase of Spanish bonds, is also sending by radio detailed information as to the organization in Spain of a "Soviet government" similar to that existing in Russia.

France, thanks to the existing alliance with Russia—resented by many of the old-fashioned Frenchmen, who ask, "Is Stalin the real ruler of France?"—is under pressure from Russia to help the Madrid government against the insurgents.

If Spain should become really sovietized, under the guidance of Russia, the Spanish peninsula would be practically a branch and a dependency of Soviet Russia at the southern west corner of Europe.

Russia, whose planes have been taking information on manufacturing poison gas and building factories to the nations that are friendly to her in central Europe, might build up a chain of Communist states too powerful even for the dictator governments of Italy and Germany, and the remaining "democratic" government of Great Britain. It is not a happy time for Europeans, or for any interested in Europe's future peace and welfare.

Hitler is reported on the point of siding with the Spanish insurgents against the radical Madrid regime, because of savage attacks made on Nazi officers in Spain. It is reported that a woman in charge of the Hitler office was threatened with death if she would not reveal the whereabouts of her principal; dragged into the streets, her dress was soaked with gasoline. An interruption prevented applying the match.

The dedication of the magnificent war monument, designed by a Canadian artist, recently unveiled by the king of England in memory of the Canadian soldiers who fell at Vimy Ridge, is important to all our friends north of the boundary line. It is interest, also, to Americans that were sent abroad in that famous fight, with which we had nothing to do except lose our men and money. American soldiers, who liked the Canadian and Australian troops better than any others they met, according to statements made by many, testify to the courage with which the colonial Englishmen fought at Vimy Ridge and elsewhere.

Arthur Brisbane

Statistics of the war show that on the side of the allies, the percentage of death was higher among the Canadians than among any other troops involved, excepting the French themselves, who fought at their own frontiers to defend their own homes.

Sixty thousand Canadians lie buried, each one an "unknown soldier," around that great monument. The king of England, after a long and really admirable speech of appreciation, lowered the flag that hid the monument which, as he said, will forever honor the courage of the Canadians that fought and that lie dead and buried.

The war that killed so many millions, blowing them to pieces, leaving them to die shattered and agonizing on the battlefield; suffocating, making them insane with the poison gas just coming into fashion, seemed between 1914 and 1918 as horrible as any war could be.

But the civil war, the worst, most savage, pitiless and ferocious of all wars, now going on in Spain, makes the big war comparatively mild.

Lord Rothermere's London Daily Mail eclipses in the horror of one published statement all stories of horror in the war and goes beyond anything that could possibly be believed.

When the French newspaper, the Friend of the People, described the fighters for Madrid's radical government digging up and throwing from their graves the bodies of Catholic nuns, that horror seems beyond belief.

But Lord Rothermere's newspaper prints the statement that other nuns ALIVE were seized—three of them—their clothing saturated with gasoline, and burned to death. The Daily Mail also quotes the statement that in the city of Barcelona, when the radical forces had conquered the rebellious insurgent inhabitants, "any Catholic priest in the city was butchered without mercy."

He didn't want to walk all day, and he did want to see what the other papers had to say of last night's events in the Coconut Bar. At Fifth avenue, therefore, he turned into the public library. The reports were much alike—"Eight club proprietor killed resisting arrest" and "The indictment against Jay Rogers, now held for the Kelly murder, probably will be dismissed tomorrow." Barry sat, almost alone, in the "newspaper room," turning the case over in his mind. Then he asked for all files of one of the tabloids.

He was nearly an hour finding an account of the Winslow wedding. Without any definite knowledge of the date, it was a bit like looking for the proverbial needle in a haystack. Barry's curiosity was rewarded, at last, when he stumbled upon a pictorial front page headed, "Lawyer Weds Convict's Widow." The ceremony had taken place at St. Stephen's. There were pictures of the church and of the convict—George Selby (inset) and Love Nest—where he took his bride. "The wonder little 'inset' might have been a portrait of Nicholas Murray Butler or Jack Dempsey, and the house might have been any house, anywhere. There was an obviously faked photograph of a bride, and an obviously genuine one of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow leaving St. Stephen's." "Gosh," Barry reflected, "no wonder Mrs. Winslow had a nervous breakdown!"

The story, on the second page, was the best tabloid tradition. "Five years ago," it began, "Peter Winslow, secure young attorney, secured the acquittal of George Selby, charged with participating in the robbery of a candy store in the Bronx. Yesterday, Peter Winslow, rich and famous criminal lawyer, and George Selby's widow were the principal figures in what was to have been a secret ceremony at St. Stephen's."

The present Mrs. Winslow had run away with George Selby while he was a cadet in a military school. They had come to New York, routed the "love nest," and been "blissfully happy" until Selby ran out of money, and was compelled to take his wife to a boarding house. He had been arrested there, for the candy store robbery, in April, 1921. Peter Winslow had got him off, but the following June, he was caught in another robbery in Philadelphia, and sentenced to a long term in the State Penitentiary. With two other convicts, "Lefty" Miller and "Mugs" Scanlan, he had escaped in October, 1923. Peniless, the men "staged a hold-up that same night in Fairmount Park. The victim called for help, and Selby killed him. Scanlan was shot dead by a police officer, and Selby, attempting to get away, jumped into the river, and was drowned. His body was found two weeks later, entangled in an anchor chain."

Winslow had given Mrs. Selby work in his office, and "three years after Selby's death, love culminated in the ceremony at St. Stephen's."

That explained a good deal, Barry thought, remembering the soft, round, pink little woman with worried eyes. It explained Peter's protective attitude. It might explain his quick interest in the Rogers case, in which, Barry had told Winslow, Peggy had been "putting up such a game fight to make a man of her husband."

That sort of thing always gets me," Peter had observed. "A woman tied up to some man who's not worthy of her, and in love with him."

Peter's "Julie" had been in love with her first husband, then. And he with her, evidently, to judge by what the tabloids said of their happiness. "Must have been something good in that chap," Barry reasoned. "Probably realized what his wife was trying to do for him. We're a curious mixture."

He was still brooding over curious mixtures, and other things, when a clock struck somewhere, and reminded him that, by now, there might be a message as to young Ridder's release awaiting him at his hotel.

There wasn't.

All Thursday afternoon Barry sat in his room and, at five o'clock, he called Peter's secretary. "Nothing definite yet," she informed him. "The District Attorney's making the motion all right, but it'll be tomorrow now before anything comes of it."

Against his better judgment, then, Barry phoned Harwood. "Don't worry," the city editor said. "Have you seen tonight's Globe? Whole first page one loud yell for this kid's release. They'll be so glad to get him off their hands."

In spite of his friendliness, Barry noticed that Ernie didn't say, "Come on down; we've something else for you." Nor even, "Of course, we'll expect you to cover Rogers getting out of jail." Why should he? "The big beat" was Harwood's "beat," not Barry's, and, anyway, the old man would be at his desk the day after tomorrow. Harwood did say that, at last. "You'd better see him. I'll phone you when. Probably not before Monday. He'll be pretty busy for a day or two. Of course, you'll be around for your salary on Saturday. Might look me up then."

He was still on the pay roll, at least. That was important, what with overdrafts and hotel bills, and such things. Sober reflection, backed by experience, had persuaded Barry that he couldn't get much on his wardrobe. The studs and cuff-links were rather cheap stuff. He had sold an overcoat once—in this very town—for three dollars.

Saturday's money would just square the bank account. As for the hotel bill—"Well, I'll give them my clothes," Barry decided, "and I'll have something left in my jeans when I move out of here."

He phoned Peggy again, and then dined frugally and went back to his room. Step by step, he went over its details, seeing everything in the new light cast by the events of the past few hours. At midnight, for the fifth or sixth time, he re-read the story in the Globe. "Well, that's that," he said aloud, tossing the paper into the wastebasket and winding his silver wrist-watch. "Morano's dead, young Ridder'll be free tomorrow, old Ridder'll be home Saturday, and that's that. Wonder where I'll be a week from now."

It didn't matter much. "Nothing matters much," he told himself again, dwelling on Pat's phrase. "Not without Pat, it doesn't. She's a grand girl. Out of my class, though. A week from now, she'll be playing tennis and going over to dinner at the Ridders. Wonder if Peg'll be there. Wonder what's going to happen to those two young people?"

In Friday morning's paper, under "Personal Intelligence," he found a mention of the Winslows. "Mr. and Mrs. Peter Winslow are sailing on the Aquitania next Wednesday," the item read, "for an extended tour of the Continent." That was that, too. Barry's drama was ending with all its principal characters disposed of, as well-made drama should end.

Winslow's secretary called him just before noon. "Mr. Winslow wants me to tell you that Rogers will be free in an hour or two."

"How's Mrs. Winslow?"

"Much better. Mr. Winslow's still with her, though."

"And the Hamblides?"

"No; they went back to Southampton last night."

Once more, that was that, Barry thought, getting his hat and making tracks for the subway. He reached the Tombs well in advance of official orders for the release of "Jay Rogers."

"Maybe I Was," Ridder Admitted.

It was nearly five o'clock, indeed, when "Jay Rogers" appeared, looking very white and haggard, and the last train had left for Southampton. "You can talk to Peggy on the phone," Barry told him, "and then you'd better have dinner with me, and a good night's rest at my hotel. The Bremen gets in very early, and you'll want to be on the dock."

Jack looked at him quizzically.

"Will I?"

"Won't you?"

"I suppose so. I'd like to see my mother."

"I'd like to see her myself," Barry said. "She's been swell to you, all right."

"Yes."

At dinner, Jack declared, "I'll take that job on the paper now, if my father'll give it to me."

"Why not?"

"You started me thinking. I can see the old man's viewpoint. He's got to be decent to Peggy, though. It's both of us, or neither. . . . What's going to happen to you?"

"Search me!"

"Look here!" Jack blurted. "I'm Ridder now. Who needs to know that I was ever Jay Rogers? I've been at Southampton all the time, writing letters to my mother, and everything. You've been Barry Gilbert, working on the Globe, and likely to go on working there. What's the matter with that?"

"Willets is the matter with it," Barry answered—"Willets, and Evans, and Winslow, and all the camera-clickers on the newspapers. There've been several pictures of you already. I can't understand why you weren't identified long ago."

"Maybe I was," Ridder admitted. "Your old college chums don't exactly run after you while you're in jail. They don't get to be college chums until you're in Who's Who."

"Anyway," Barry continued, "your scheme's out. I want to come clean. Don't ask me why. I was going to run away a week ago, and I couldn't make it. 'Gentlemen don't do that,' I said. I've got a new picture of myself as a gentleman."

"That's what does the trick, I guess,"

Jack speculated. "Most of us spend our lives trying to live up to the portraits of ourselves that hang over our mental mantel-pieces. Yours was of a reckless, devil-may-care young vagabond. Then you moved into a house, and company, where that picture didn't fit. You hung up a new one, and you've got to live up to that now. It was the same way with me. The picture of myself I liked was of an irresponsible, slightly dissipated young genius. The family portraits didn't appeal to me. Yours did—your new picture of yourself. I mean, I'm going to try to be like that the rest of my life."

"They were lingering over cigars and coffee now."

"What is a gentleman?" Barry asked.

Jack smiled.

"The fellow who gets the right portrait."

"I suppose so," Barry said. "Family and clothes didn't make you one—not when you were getting drunk and forging checks. I wasn't one when I took another man's name, and money, and made up to a girl who thought I was somebody else. . . . Pictures over mantel-pieces. That's another word for tradition, I guess. The tradition that makes men defend women, and go down on sinking ships, and all that sort of thing. When that stops being our picture of ourselves, 'God help all of us,' I told Pat once. . . . Come on; let's go to a movie!"

CHAPTER XII

The next afternoon—around three o'clock—Harwood phoned.

"The old man wants to see you. Here at his office. I'd come quick if I were you."

So Jack had told him.

Or Evans.

"I'd be glad if you'd tell Willets, and the rest," Barry had said to the chauffeur. "I'll save me introducing the subject." It would, too. He had dreaded his first few moments with Ridder—beginning his story with a pair of cold, calm eyes boring into him. They would be cold eyes; he felt sure of that.

And they were.

"The big chief" sat at his big desk in a big, richly-furnished office with a big door and a little one. The big double door opened into the reception room. Barry entered through that, and found himself facing Ridder and the smaller single door behind him.

Ridder was reading a radiogram, and he went on reading. A tall, thin man, with New England written all over him. A youngish man for his age, which might have been fifty. He wore gold-rimmed spectacles. His long, thin, absolutely straight mouth was higher at the right end, and his right eye was longer and narrower than his left. He had a sharp chin, and a thin nose, and a broad forehead, with thin, graying, sandy hair. The kind of man who could say "Good morning" as though that ended the discussion.

"All right," Barry repeated to himself. "I'll take my medicine. It'll soon be over, anyway. He isn't going to give a damn what I did for his son. If I can say anything to make it easier for those two youngsters and Jack—Wonder what's back of that little door."

He was still wondering when the big chief looked up.

"You're Gilbert?"

"Yes, sir."

"Alias Ridder, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

They were cold eyes. Very cold.

Mostly to end the silence, Barry said, "I suppose your son told you."

"Nobody told me. I've known all about you for two months."

"You've known—"

"I heard my wife's talk with my son the day before we sailed. Through the door to my bedroom. I heard her invite him to Southampton. Next morning, I arranged with Willets to give me a full report of his doings there."

"And—?"

Barry was thinking in monosyllables.

"And, in his first letter, he mentioned your red hair."

Barry grinned.

"He also mentioned your taking a hundred dollar bill out of an envelope addressed to Mrs. Ridder."

The grin faded.

"You haven't made a move that I haven't known about."

He waited.

"Why didn't you have me arrested?"

"Because I knew that my son was in prison, accused of this murder. I read about that less than an hour after I'd satisfied myself that you weren't my son. Jay Rogers. I'd had a man following him all about Florida. The man's report agreed perfectly with the newspaper account of Jay Rogers."

"Still—"

"What was I to do? Sell? The doctor said that was out of the question. I wired Harwood 'Rogers didn't kill Kelly. Find out who did.' Twenty-four hours later, I knew you were on the Globe, and why, and that you'd succeeded in interesting Winslow."

Our Early Windows

Our windows originally were divided into small panes, because only small panes could be made economically. Glass was blown like toy balloons, and, naturally, only small areas could be cut from these glass globes to fit in a flat frame. When the art of glassmaking made large panes possible the tendency was to clear our windows of all cross pieces and have large unobstructed surfaces.

Source of Olive Oil

Olive oil comes, as its name implies, from the olive, the fruit of small tree which grows in southern Europe. In its unripe state, the olive is eaten between the courses of a dinner. When ripe, it yields olive oil, which has many uses—both internal and external. It is even used as a substitute for butter in some countries bordering on the Mediterranean.

Solving Midseason Dress Problem

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN summer clothes begin to take on a faded and somewhat worse-for-wear "has been" air, and you are loath to force the season by donning advance fall fashions before the psychological moment arrives, then what? Aye, that's the problem that has destroyed perfectly good dispositions and peace of mind of the fair sex throughout decades and decades of time.

However, we are not going to be tantalized and tormented with such momentous worries this midseason, for good news concerning this question is winging its way fashionward at this very moment. Tidings of great cheer, they are told in terms of dresses and suits tailored of the black or dark-toned silk sheers, nets and laces which have come into favor of late as they never came before. These cool and comfortable dark sheers are a perfect blend from summer to fall. In such you are sure to hold poise and serenity in the assurance that you will be smartly and appropriately costumed all through the prologue which nature and the weatherman play to autumn. In fact, no wardrobe may be said to be complete these days without at least one tailored black or dark sheer in its collection.

Acquire a two-piece gown of black silk marquisette as shown to the left in the illustration and your between-season dress trials will vanish like dew on a sunny morn. In regard to selecting a sheer for dependable wear, perhaps a few words of advice will not come amiss. When you buy, insist on a weave of guaranteed quality. In order to get maximum service and real joy and satisfaction in the costume you rely upon to carry you through the between-season valiantly, the sheer of which it is made should be nothing less than pure silk and fast dye. Perish the thought of a shoddy black that is apt to take on a greenish bilious cast as cheaper blacks in cheaper weaves are wont

TYROLEAN JACKET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here is a little indispensable jacket you will want to wear with your culottes or shorts. It is made of white linen bound in bright colors like copen, red, navy or black with silver buttons. It is colorful and has the decorative buttons because it is of Tyrolean inspiration. Much of the fashionable sportswear this season reflects influence of Austrian peasant dress. The outstanding fashion note of this attractive jacket is the hand-quilted Trapunto design at the neck and on the pockets and sleeves. The vogue for hand-quilting is growing into a most outstanding style movement.

Why It Is Castile Soap

to do. Buy pure silk and your dress will wear dependably. As to the smart styling of the model pictured, note that it is a tunic costume. Newly arriving fashions verify previous reports that the tunic will continue to be the big idea for fall. The large black buttons that fasten this tunic, also the modish short sleeve and the white jabot, register important fashion details.

Advance fashions tell of the emphasis placed on the princess silhouette for both dresses and coats as the print costume with full-length princess coat of the print in this group demonstrates. The print is black and wine on a cream ground. There is increasing interest shown for wine and red shades and they are regarded as color "firsts" for fall and winter. An innovation is the use of velvet revers on coats and jackets after the manner noted in this costume. This coat-dress qualifies admirably as an ideal midsummer costume. Its sheer print guarantees comfort while its modish velvet revers tune to the march of time that leads to fall days.

In the redingote made of fine black lace as portrayed to the right, answer to the midseason dress problem is given in no uncertain terms. A lace redingote such as this may be worn over different dresses converting the simplest frock into a costume of style distinction. For formal wear pose it over a black satin slip. What could make a more charming hostess or dinner gown than the redingote of black lace topping a white cotton pique foundation as here illustrated. The soft pique collar and perky bow lend fetching accents to this costume. You'll love a black lace redingote or jacket over your summer pastel silk crepe frocks. Try out the idea. You will find it well worth while. Separate lace jackets are smart, too, in either black or white.

GLACE KID IS NEW

FALL GLOVE STYLE

The smartest gloves this fall will be "smooth." There is a definite revival, to quote Vogue, "of the firm, moulded hand," possibly following the moulded silhouette, the moulded bust and moulded hips, which will be featured for fall. As the high style leather of the coming season, Paris is consequently sponsoring thin, supple glace kid. It has always been a standby and favorite, but now it is coming up rapidly in the fashion world.

Since three out of the four gloves Molyneux will show with his collection are glace kid, it goes without saying that the smartest women in Paris and this country will adopt the fashion. Fashions, as a whole, are becoming more and more feminine and the glace glove is but a natural result of that trend. Thin, smooth leather is the most flattering a woman can wear. It outlines the shape of her hand and makes her fingers appear long and slender.

Color is again a dominant note. Colored gloves are not going out of style. On the contrary, the fashion will be harnessed to practical, sensible shades, of which some will become almost staples.

Prints and Big Hats

Colorful prints, broad-brimmed hats, and strap pumps with high built-up heels are favorites among outdoor diners at Manhattan's fashionable terrace cafes during the noon hour.

Choosing Corsages

A good principle to follow in selecting a corsage or shoulder bouquet is that the large flowers look best on the tall woman, small ones on a short woman.

blaze was discovered fire-fighters gathered and after several hours of gruelling effort finally extinguished the flames before any unharvested

ered.

Freight trains nowadays act like express specials.
New freight schedules are so fast, sometimes wonder if everything has to be delivered day before yesterday.

Many of our passenger are running faster schedules. Well, one thing is sure. We make faster runs, but the first railroad commandment is still
"Safety First." That's one rule they won't change.

Western railroads and allied industries provided jobs for 750,000 workers last year. Some of them live in our town. Good neighbors.

Passenger fares are now the lowest in history with substantial reductions on round trips.
And no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

This new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight—I heard some traveling salesmen talking about it on the train yesterday. They said it saves shippers a lot of money and centers all responsibility on the railroad. The railroad picks up the freight at shipper's door and delivers to receiver's door. Of course, local delivery men get the haul from door-to-car and car-to-door at both ends. The railroad handles the whole transaction.

When railroads are busy,
I notice towns along the railroad are prosperous.
The merchants put more ads in the newspapers.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

THE NEW IDEA OF CANCER.

ANY CASES CAN BE CURED IF REPORTED PROMPTLY.

Bulletin No. 14.

American Society for the Control of Cancer, 1250 Sixth Avenue New York, N. Y.

THE WARFARE AGAINST CANCER.

Cancer is a disease against which improved sanitation is not capable of producing any effect and personal hygiene has but a limited application. It is, therefore, necessary to attack this scourge in some other way.

The organized warfare against cancer which is being carried on in civilized countries, aims to discover the individual cases of the disease at the earliest possible moment and provide competent medical attention for the patient. There must be hospital and home care of a proper kind.

The public must give full cooperation to the medical profession, for it is obviously impossible for a physician to render any help unless the patient applies for it. The first thing then is for the public to learn the danger signals of cancer and report immediately to a medical man upon the suspicion being aroused that cancer is present or impending.

Hospital and medical men must be prepared to deal effectively with the patients who come to them. Fortunately, there are excellent hospitals throughout the United States and competent surgeons are to be found nearly everywhere.

A second important line of attack is research. More facts about cancer need to be discovered: how and why it occurs, by what procedure it may be prevented and cured. There is a good deal of information upon these subjects already, but there is need of much more.

Cancer research is being prosecuted in many institutes and hospitals and by not a few physicians and surgeons privately. The records of all this work are printed in medical journals, some of which are devoted exclusively to cancer. There is hardly an association of physicians or surgeons in America which does not assign a considerable part of its program to the discussion of cancer.

A hopeful outlook should exist among those who are engaged in the warfare against cancer. The public is becoming rapidly aroused to the need of cooperating and giving financial support to the forces engaged in this great conflict. Everybody should give his eager assistance.

The time to cure a cancer is when it is beginning.

If you think you have any of the symptoms described in these articles you should be examined by your doctor or at a hospital at once.

Subsequent Article—"THE CURABILITY OF CANCER."

Monday, August 24, 1936.

(Federal State Market News Service) Cattle, estimated receipts 500, calves 600. Early trading was active on the San Antonio market Monday on the comparatively light receipts. Light weight calves were weak to 25c lower on later rounds. Most other classes held about steady with last week's close. Cows and bulls were active. Steers and fed yearlings were in light supply.

Most good fat calves and light weight yearlings went to packers at $5.00 to $5.50 with odd lots of heavy calves and short fed light weight yearlings to $6.00 and above. Common to medium cows were active at $3.25 to $4.00, a few good fat cows to $4.25 with cutter grades down to $2.50, a few shells below. Heavy bulls sold readily at mostly $4.25 and down. Odd lots of common to medium matured grass steers ranged mostly at $4.50 to $5.50. Stocker calves and yearlings sold around $4.50 to $5.00.

WESTMOORLAND NOW A SENIOR COLLEGE.

San Antonio, August 24, 1936.—Westmoorland College, which enters the ranks of a four-year senior college this fall, has installed a unique arrangement to promote individualized training for all students, according to President W. W. Jackson.

Isolated experiments made in other schools have been combined to provide more unified instruction, wider opportunity to specialize in desired subjects, development of special talents, and in short, development of the "whole" student, mentally, physically, and emotionally.

The transferring of credits to other schools, however, will not be interfered with in any way in any of the four years' work at Westmoorland.

"We are revising our methods to meet modern conditions of living," Jackson declared Monday.

From an administrative standpoint the school officials will be divided into the divisions of instruction, business and personnel. The function of the instructive division will be to integrate the various fields of knowledge, and to maintain the school's standards. The business staff will run the financial end of the school. The personnel division, of extreme importance in the new arrangement, will be concerned with the student's life, outside more than inside the classroom. It will include the health service with preventative work stressed, treatment toward mental hygiene, physical activities, vocational guidance, personal problems, religious training, and social activities.

All things that are ordinarily classed as extra-curricular activities will be integrated as a part of the new program for the benefit of the student.

To accomplish the specific aims the instructive branch is being divided three ways into the divisions of social sciences, natural sciences, and letters and arts. The student may choose any of these three divisions as his field of concentration, and may specialize in that field as much and as far as his individual talents will allow. The student's first two years will be occupied with general survey and orientation; his last two years will be devoted to specialized study. This specialization will be continual, widened, although at the same time the student may maintain a course or courses in anything outside that division which may have attracted him as an avocation. Of course, the new setup will still allow for training in pre-professional courses, such as pre-engineering, pre-medicine, and pre-law.

Westmoorland's teaching methods are to be altered somewhat, too. In all courses teachers will be instructed to demonstrate the connection between the subject close at hand and others the student is studying. The conference system will be adopted, with the professor acting as a guide for the student's own efforts. In this way each student can dive into his own interests as far as his own energy and initiative will take him.

While grades and credits will be retained, they will be used more as a measure for what the student has missed than for what he already has, and under such conditions, Jackson believes the student will put more effort into his work for his own sake.

The number of faculty members having doctor's degrees has been greatly increased, and the general faculty, all members of which have been educated in the best universities in America and Europe, has been increased 25 percent. Those having doctor's degrees are: Darrell Boyd Harmon, head of the social science division; William Marvin Patterson, English; Mrs. Francis K. Hendricks, social sciences; Charles N. Wunder, mathematics; Carl Venh, music.

Classes under the new system will open September 21. The system will apply mostly to freshmen and sophomores, but wherever possible, upperclassmen will be fitted into it. The changes do not apply to the school's new downtown night classes of adult education.

Admirers Shower Major With Gifts

Major Bowes of amateur fame and part of his famous collection of "range bonnets," gifts from his Texas admirers.

Hand made, hand engraved bonnets are only part of the unique collection of gifts from admiring friends that have poured in to Major Edward Bowes, America's Number One honored citizen.

During the past two years, as radio listeners know, every Bowes broadcast has resulted in the Major being made an honorary something or other. He is the police chief and the fire marshall of more towns than probably any other man in the country. In Texas he is captain of the "Texas Rangers" besides being an honorary member of the Jovian staff, a member of the Texas Centennial and the possessor of an unusually fine collection of ten gallon Stetsons or range bonnets as they are called in the Lone Star State.

In fact it has become such a steady practice for the Texas admirers of the Major to express their admiration with a gift of a typical Texas hat, and so many orders were sent in to the Stetson factory in Philadelphia from dealers for "special hats for the Major" that the manufacturer sent a representative to New York with a head measuring machine, to insure a perfect fit for the ten gallon chapeaux intended to grace the Bowes' brow.

A Westerner himself Major Bowes knows his "John B's" and while they are too conspicuous for Broadway appearances, he keeps them carefully wrapped in cellophane at the top of his trophy cabinet in his New York office, against the time when he can head West and rough it a bit in the country he knows and loves so well.

THANK YOU, MAJOR BOWES!

When clock strikes six on Sunday eve,
We want to listen—all else must cease,
Radio on, ah there he goes;
Amateurs' beloved, dear Major Bowes.

"Around and around she goes,

Mr. Barnes: "Do you want a hair cut?"
Benny: "No, I want them all cut."

Where she stops nobody knows!"
These are the words heard after the going.
Your voice really charms old and young.

Giving those who passed your test
A chance on air to do their best.
The units prove what they can do.
Radioland's thanks we offer you.

—CLOTILDE T. MECHLER.
Mr. Barnes: "Any particular way?"
Benny: "Yes, off."

HOME OWNERS LOANS.

Residents of Medina County received a total of $18,150 from the Home Owner's Corporation during the three-year period of refinancing operations which terminated June 13, 1936, according to the final figures furnished H. P. Drought, state director for the National Emergency Council. This sum represented 15 individual loans.

A total of 44,361 distressed home owners in Texas were extended aid in the sum of $103,208,774. Of this money it is estimated that $6,343,000 went toward the payment of taxes and assessments, the estimated average of tax and assessment payments per loan in Texas being $143. According to the 1930 United States Census reports there were 374,755 owned non-farm homes in Texas. The Home Owner's Loan Corporation refinanced mortgages on 11.8 per cent of this number. The total number of loans made in all states, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska was 1,021,817, involving the sum of $3,092,379,784, making the average loan $3,027.

More than 98 per cent of all money involved went for the refinancing of distressed homes by means of long-term replacement mortgages which are to be amortized fully over the term of the loan in small monthly payments. The balance of the money advanced went for the restoration and conditioning of properties.

It is estimated that $228,453,000 of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation advances went to the tax offices of the nation, with the national average tax payment per loan being $224.

law, who was supposed to have been shot by Bob Ford on April 3, 1882, has returned to the realm of the living after a hide-out of fifty-one years, and will be seen in person at the Colonial Theatre in Hondo Sunday night, August 30th.

Explaining that the historical "picnic" shooting was a frame-up, he says that he, his brother Frank, and Ford plotted to get rid of Charles, an outlaw who had been committing crimes and leaving indications that it was the work of the boys. When Ford shot Bigelow, he immediately changed guns and the marks of identification with the man, and escaped into a hiding place. During his seclusion, James lived a quiet life as a dealer in the and orses, spending most of his time in Colorado and passing as "Bill Williams".

When he decided to return to the life, James obtained assurances from Washington that charges in effect against him were no longer in force because there were living witnesses. Accompanied by a delegation of early settlers who identified him, James paid a visit to the governor of Missouri and was paid the $10,000 reward.

He appeared at the Colonial Theatre, where he will recount the highlights of his more interesting experiences.

In addition to Jesse James in person, the Colonial Theatre is offering play entertainers.

The screen attraction is "Border Guns", a western feature with Bill

Kellems at Medina Lake. The day was spent in swimming, boating and fishing, and in photographing the family group. At noon a sumptuous picnic lunch was spread under the trees. San Sebastian Feeling Effect of War in Spain

Seaside Resort Experiences Undesired Publicity.

Washington.—Castles in Spain cannot resist air raids, it seems, even in the enchanted atmosphere of a fashionable summer resort. In San Sebastian, the serenity of sun-drenched swimming and siestas has been disturbed by sharp battle and capture by belligerent rebels. "Spain's most fashionable summer resort, San Sebastian, has provided some excitement not advertised in hotel publicity—a share in the country's revolt," says the National Geographic society. "Vacationists had almost forgotten the city's importance as capital of the ancient Basque Province of Guipuzcoa and summer headquarters of most of the diplomatic corps.

Lola Williams, for 14 years the secretary to former Vice President Charles Curtis, is now in Topeka as a new member of Gov. Alfred M. Landon's secretariat. She is a native of Kansas and is considered one of the most capable of America's politically experienced secretaries.

Spaniards from other sections, diplomats, and foreigners, however few in the city's 60,000 people, have given San Sebastian a European veneer over its native aspect.

"In the midst of the summer frivolities of Spain's fashionable world, local Basques impassively continue their fishing, speaking their strange language unintelligible even to many Spanish visitors. Their name for their city is Iruchulo.

"The city stands near the eastern end of Spain's northern coast, 10 miles from the French border where the numerous visitors change trains on the overnight trip from Paris.

"Here the Pyrenees meet the sea, and both unite to create unique qualifications for a summer resort. The Bay of Biscay rolls into San Sebastian's semi-circular harbor in a half-moon of blue-green, the same regular curve repeated in the beach's yellow crescent. Because its shape resembles the scallop shell's, the harbor is called La Concha (the shell).

"At the opposite ends of its mile diameter rise rocky headlands which have offered for centuries protection against naval assaults. SANITARIUM RESULT OF MAN'S BIG IDEA

Wins His Fight After Becoming Representative.

Gaylord, Mich.—Ruddy-faced and broad-shouldered Fred Ming, one-time sheriff of Cheboygan county and a state representative, became a man with an "idea" when tuberculosis claimed the lives of his three brothers while they were still in their twenties.

Ming wanted a tuberculosis sanatorium for the upper tier counties of Michigan's lower peninsula. So he became a state representative, and then speaker of the house at Lansing. He advocated a bill for taxation of malt, the revenue to be used for a tuberculosis hospital for the 37 northern counties.

The bill was passed by the state legislature, but Gov. Wilbur Brucker, an ardent dry who knew malt was used to make beer, vetoed the bill.

Ming was not discouraged. He moved through the cloakrooms. "I don't care," he told his fellow legislators, "where that hospital is built. Put it in Cheboygan county or anywhere else, just so it's convenient."

When they hesitated, he said: "Tuberculosis is killing 150 to 200 persons a year because we lack hospital facilities."

The bill was passed over the governor's veto. During the intervening years since 1933, $250,000 was set aside in malt tax moneys. The federal government supplied an additional $204,000, and the ground was broken here recently.

Several state notables, including Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, Paul A. Martin, of the sanatorium building commission, and doctors, were present. They all spaded a shovel of earth. Then Ming, now an old man, lumbered through the crowd.

"TIN CAN ISLAND"

Stamp Collectors Prize "Tin Can Island" Mail.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

ALTHOUGH the South Sea Island of Niuafoou is the top of an active volcano that erupted in 1929 and destroyed a village, it remains the happy home of some 1,100 of those superb Polynesians, the Tongans.

Dwelling for untold generations on this remote crater in the sea, they have learned to act quickly and shrewdly in volcanic emergencies, and in recent years there has been little loss of life.

How they behave was dramatically illustrated at 4 a. m. on July 25, 1929. A hundred or more villagers, the entire population of Futu, on the north-west coast, were awakened by a rumbling and saw fire breaking out in the hillside less than two miles to the southeast.

No time was lost. The alarm was spread in the village, and the babes in arms, the sick and the aged were hurriedly carried off along a good road that led to the northern village of Angaha. All realized that safety lay in reaching there or the high ground of the island's circular ridge.

From three vents on a fracture that opened northward, the molten rock descended upon Futu. By eight o'clock in the morning most of the abandoned buildings were consumed by fire and buried under floods of heavy basaltic lava. Pouring into the ocean, the hot flows killed fish, sent up clouds of steam, and heaped enormous quantities of black sand along the water front.

Fringing the shore were patches of cultivated land that remained uninjured among the lava streams. In one of these the returning villagers found a few of their horses, pigs and chickens still alive. Thanks to the prompt exodus, every one of the human inhabitants escaped.

How It Became "Tin Can Island."

Niuafoou reminds one of a hat with a hole in the crown. At the bottom of the hole is an islet-dotted lake of fresh water, with its bed some 200 feet below sea level. Its surface only 70 feet above. The wide "brim" has been formed by lava flows.

So nearly perfect is the ring which Niuafoou forms about its lake-enclosing crater that at first sight it appears to be a coral atoll. The island's highest point is about 800 feet above the waves, but the volcanic cone it crowns thrusts itself up some 6,000 feet from the ocean floor.

This detached bit of the Tongan archipelago is a straggler from the line made by those islands north of New Zealand. It lies near the center of the ocean triangle formed by Samoa, Tonga, and Fiji.

Lacking harbors, the island is utterly isolated. Precarious was the regular carrying of mail to and from the island until recent years. The monthly mail steamer, unable to anchor, stopped about a mile off the northern landing at Angaha. Natives, fortified with log floats, swam out to it, regardless of sharks, holding above the water brown paper-wrapped packages of outgoing letters tied to the tops of sticks.

The sailors on the steamer lowered a bucket and collected these parcels. In exchange they dropped into the water the more bulky mail from the outside world, soldered in large biscuit tins. The athletic villagers towed these tins ashore and thus completed delivery of the mail.

An unfortunate encounter between a swimmer and a shark finally caused a suspension of the swimming mail service, and native canoes now collect the tin cans. It is easy to understand why Niuafoou, called "Good Hope Island" on some charts, has become known also as "Tin Can Island."

On the west side of Niuafoou is a desert of new lava flows, but on the east is a tropical glory of coconuts, ironwoods, mangoes and pandanus, yams, taros, papayas, sweet potatoes, pineapples, bananas, melons, and manioc.

Although the island lies some 15½ degrees south of the equator, the trade winds give it a delightful climate, much like that of Hawaii.

Explosive Eruption of 1886.

Explosive volcanic eruptions around the lake have occurred about 72 years apart, and lava outbreaks in the western deserts have come at intervals of approximately 16 years.

The last steam-blast eruption, which occurred in 1886, was a major event in the history of Niuafoou. There was no loss of life, for the trade wind forced the huge cauliflower clouds of sand and dust westward, away from the settlements. The site of this eruption was near the northeast corner of the big lake, where large blocks of cliff rock were engulfed, and heaps of and were piled 200 to 400 feet high. Bonds were left where the explosive materials had formed. About three feet of ash fell on the settlements.

The story goes that an earthquake shook the island with a gentle swaying motion at 7 p. m. on August 31, 1886, and smaller shocks continued till midnight, causing alarm. Then came a detonation, a "rocket" ascended 3,000 feet above the lake, and quaking ceased. Violent thunderstorms developed, and lightning struck in many places.

A blizzard of black dust and sand weighted down the vegetation during a night of inky darkness. On the leeward side of the island, broken fragments of rock and pumice, along with sand and fine dust, piled 20 feet deep. The eruption continued in spasms, geyserlike, for 18 days, with recurrences of terrifying clouds of dust that shut off the light of day.

Only two months before, Tarawera volcano had erupted disastrously in New Zealand, indicating volcanic sympathy between two craters hundreds of miles apart on the same general rift in the earth's crust; and Funafoou (Falcon Island), nearer to Niuafoou; had begun eruption in October, 1885.

Legend of Ahau's Destruction.

Destruction of property by hurricanes and eruptions on the northern and western sides of the island have been lamentable during the last century. The story of the village of Ahau in the southwest is reminiscent of that of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Ahau, legend says, was founded by men and women who, refusing to conform to the laws governing legal marriage, rebelled against the strict high chief at Angaha.

They founded their village purposely on the side of the island most remote from Angaha, and their headman denounced with impassioned oratory the taxes imposed upon them by the high chief. He called upon the gods to send a sign from heaven to destroy all his people rather than permit them to submit to such oppression.

Whatever the truth of these stories, certain it is that on June 24, 1853, the ground rifted and lava spouted up directly under the village headman's house. Such destruction of human life by a sudden lava flow is unusual in volcanic annals, for lava is usually so slow-moving that people have time to flee from it. There were earthquakes and rumblings, the crack extended itself northwestward lengthwise of the village street, and the fiery slag spouted up and flowed down to the sea. Presumably the eruption was at night, for the headman and many of the natives were trapped and burned, and the village was destroyed.

An aged woman recalls the frenzied flight of those inhabitants who escaped and the gossip about the village. She will tell you that two-thirds of the population, possibly 60 or 70 people, were killed.

When a volcanologist visited the site of this village recently, he found the lava flows covered with a moderate growth of ironwood, somewhat resembling a pine forest with its small cones and long needles. Not a trace remains of the village green or native huts.

There is a 50-foot double spatter cone of black lava at the place where the headman's house is said to have stood. From this hill all lava channels radiate to the south and west, passing into tunnels far down the flow in the direction of the seashore. On the uphill side the lava gives place abruptly to a luxuriant growth of coconuts and fertile plantation lands on the slope of the circular ridge.

Outbreaks Can Be Predicted.

A study of the eruptions and the dates when they have occurred provides some basis for predicting, roughly, when future outbreaks may occur.

It may be said that Niuafoou is continuously erupting, and that these lava flows and explosive engulfments are merely punctuation marks in a continuing process.

After an explosive eruption in 1814, the intervals were 26, 13, 14, and 19 years. From the 1886 explosive eruption to the present time the intervals were 20 and 17 years. Considering the average lava interval of 16 years, we have reason to expect another lava eruption about 1945. Adding the average explosion interval of 72 years to 1886, it may be estimated that the next explosive eruption will occur about 1958.

These expectations are not accurate forecasts, but merely suggestive experiments in volcanologic reasoning. It is probable that the explosive eruption about 1958 will break down the very high cliffs to the southeast of the lake, and that opposite this the lava flow, about 1945, will extend the crack of 1929 along the northwest shore of the island, in the direction of the village of Esia, near Angaha.

Western farmer's cost of growing the corn, hay, or meat, there are really about ten costs that we must pay (freight items Nos. 6 and 8 may be combined in some cases) as follows:

1. The Western farmer's cost of growing the product.
 2. His sales and delivery cost to the local Western dealer.
 3. Profits and handling charges for his local dealer.
 4. Freight and handling charges to some wholesale grain or hay dealer or city packer.
 5. Handling costs and profits for this wholesaler or packing house.
 6. Freight costs to the Southern distributor and wholesaler.
 7. Southern wholesaler's handling costs and profits.
 8. Freight to the Southern retailer.
 9. Retailer's handling charge and profits.
 10. Hauling and handling costs between retailer's warehouse and the Southern farmer's home.
- "And as a vivid illustration of how expensive just one of these ten items (freight costs) alone may be, we present the testimony of a supply merchant who said sometime ago: 'Many and many a time I have sold hay on which the freight costs alone were more than the farmer out West received for growing the hay.'"

53 TAXES ON YOUR LOAF OF BREAD.

The cost of government, according to the best estimates, takes more than 20 per cent of the national income.

In other words, if we work five weeks the proceeds of only four weeks' work is retained by us. The money paid us for the other week goes to government.

Only a small part of this money is taken from us in direct taxes. The greater part filters its way into government coffers through "hidden" or indirect taxes. It is a major item in the cost of living.

Bread provides an excellent example of this. No commodity is more necessary. Yet each loaf of bread you buy represents 53 different taxes paid. Some of these taxes are paid by the farmer, some by the flour mill, some by the bakery. Every one of them has added to the cost of that loaf of bread.

During the past three years the American people have paid $100,000,000 more for bread than they would have paid had its price stayed constant. Taxation was not the sole cause of the rise—but it was a potent influence.

What is true of bread, is true of meat, shoes, automobiles, furniture—anything and everything you use. Think of taxation in this way—as a thing that hits you directly in the pocketbook whenever you spend a nickel—and you'll realize what a reduction in the cost of government would mean to every person in the United States.—Industrial News Review.

REMEMBER THE ALAMO!

A new star graced the galaxy of stars
On that far day the skies knew flaming Mars.
The clouds long gone, the languid skies serene,
The streets that once ran red with blood, sweet clean,
From out the past the balmy March winds blow
Across the plains of Texas; sweet and low,
They whisper of the deeds of daring shown
When liberty was born in San Antonio;
They speak of glory of a hundred years,
Of heritage from sturdy pioneers,
Of men who carved a nation's destiny,
With knife and sword and bayonet set free
A commonwealth, nor in its freedom shared;
A mere handful of patriots who dared
Defy the tyrant horde; who nobly died;
Whose names in blood are writ and glorified.

Upon the Alamo's grim, crumbling walls
Of 'dobe, and its bullet-ridden halls
The story yet is eloquently told
Of valor that that garrison of old,
And rusted guns and bayonets and knives
That brave men laid down only with their lives,
Speak mutely, and with silence most profound,
Of heights of glory and of hallowed ground,
From out the silence, ringing loud and clear,
A man of red blood cannot fail to hear
That far cry of a century ago
Re-echoing: "Remember the Alamo!"
—LOREN PHILLIPS.

GRAPEFRUIT GROWING AT DALLAS.

Fletcher's Farming, of Hondo, has the following note regarding the growing of grapefruit at the Texas centennial, at Dallas.
Grapefruit are now growing in Dallas. The Rio Grande valley exhibit at the $25,000,000 Texas centennial virtually moved heaven and earth to establish an orchard on the exposition grounds. Even the soil in which the trees grew in the Rio Grande valley was transported to Dallas.
Those who have visited the centennial have noted the grapefruit exhibit there, and it certainly is a rare exhibit.—Fred B. Robinson in Waco News-Tribune.

News and advertising copy for this column for the week's issue should be submitted to Mr. Naegelin or mailed direct to us at Hondo not later than Tuesday night of each week. Mr. Naegelin is authorized to collect and receipt for any business for this paper.

CASTROVILLE, TEXAS, TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1936

Mrs. Henry Haller and daughter, Vivian, Mrs. A. Kilhorn and Mrs. Henry Schott were Alamo City visitors Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Lutz and children and Mr. Joe Meehler from near D'Hanis were here for the celebration Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Oerter, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Gutzzeit, and Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Naegelin of San Antonio were here for the big celebration Sunday.

Mr. Henry Frick of Eagle Pass, who never misses the big celebration, was here Sunday.

THE CELEBRATION.

Sunday, August 23rd, 1936, will long be remembered for it was the Annual Home-Coming and Visitors Day, and the record crowd attested that all former Castrovillians and many others feel great joy in participating in this annual feast.

At 9:30 A. M. the St. Louis Society with banners marched in procession to the parochial residence and escorted the Rev. Clergy to the church where Solemn High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Mateo of the Salesian Seminary. Very Rev. John Metzger, Director of St. John's Seminary of San Antonio, delivered the sermon in which he dwelt and stressed Catholic education, urging Catholic parents to give their children the best of Catholic education. His talk was well delivered and attentively listened to.

After High Mass, Benediction followed and the relics of St. Louis were offered to the faithful, which closed the Church festivities for the day.

After church services the large crowd repaired to the grounds made ready to receive them, and such a crowd! All the booths did a flourishing business and nothing occurred during the day to mar the celebration. A rodeo in the ball park also attracted a large crowd.

At night a large crowd attended the dance and enjoyed the dancing until after midnight.

FIRE DESTROYS HOME.

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the residence of Frank Groff on the east side of the river about eleven o'clock Sunday night. When the fire was discovered by strangers who happened to pass along the highway, the house was entirely wrapped in flames. Mr. Groff and family were not at home and lost everything they possessed. Some insurance was carried on the house.

The little cottage mentioned above was the first home the Managing Editor of this paper ever owned. He purchased it from the original builder and owner, Mr. H. A. W. Frick, in the latter part of 1900 or first of 1901, and lived in it during the late winter and the early spring of the latter year. He paid the munificent sum of $150.00 for it, borrowing the greater part of it from Mr. Jos. Courand, and afterwards sold it at the same price to Mrs. Barbara Hans. It's untoward destruction is regretted by him because of sentimental reasons and memories that clustered around it.

Sheriff Schuehle, Judge R. J. Noonan and John Finger of Hondo were Castroville visitors Saturday. Ralph Tschirhart and family spent last week on the Jagge ranch above Hondo.
